West Sac native makes photo narrative of California

By Al Zagofsky
Correspondent

John Steinbeck's stories of California's journey into the 20th century, and Robert Dawson's photographs of California's journey into the 21st century are like bookends. Steinbeck's writings tell of California's opportunities and challenges, and Dawson's photographs illustrate how these opportunities and challenges have sometimes been fulfilled—sometimes not.

Besides teaching photography at San Jose State and Stanford, he has published numerous books of photographs including: The Great Central Valley, Arid Waters, Farewell Promised Land, and most recently, The Public Library—all visual stories of the changing landscape of America, and most often, California.

Born in Sacramento in 1950, at the age of five, Robert Dawson's family crossed the river to make a home near West Sacramento's Westmore Oaks Elementary School.

"About the age of eight, I was given an old German EXA-2A camera," Robert said. "In the early days, I was just trying to figure out how the camera worked. It was film photography, you had to send the film out and get the prints."

"I taught myself composition and how to frame an image. I was mostly documenting my cats, my family, and the West Sacramento environment."

"I turned a hallway into a dark room and made cyanotypes—they were like architectural blueprints. You coat a piece of paper with an emulsion then lay an object on top of it, and shine a light on it. It produces a bright blue outline of the object."

"We took a trip to Clearlake, California and I photographed the landscape there—I was drawn to landscape early on. I like landscape. I like being out in nature."

After graduating from James Marshall High School, which became the old River City High School, he went to UC Santa Cruz. He never imagined making a living in photography, so he chose to major in psychology.

"I brought my camera with me to college. At the time there was a lot of Vietnam War era anti-war protests on campus and around the Santa Cruz. Maybe that was the first time that I did something that wasn't just personal."

Robert's first published work was on an assignment for the Santa Cruz alternative newspaper, Good Times. "I photographed the inside of a Watsonville cattle slaughterhouse."

In college, Robert studied psychological creativity—why people create. But he soon realized that he wanted to be creative, not study creativity. The photography bug had bitten him.

All the more so when he learned that environmental photographer, Ansel Adams, now well into his 70s, was living in Carmel, outside Santa Cruz.

"He had a policy that as a young photographer, if you wanted to show him your work, you had to show up at his house at 5 o'clock on Friday night and have a cocktail with him, and he would give you feedback on your work."

"He said that he was as proud of his work for the environment as he was for his photography," Robert said. "That acted as an inspiration to using photography as a way of combining my interest in different fields. As I was coming into photography, he was a perfect role model for me. I wanted to be that person."

Eventually, Robert moved beyond Ansel's aesthetic and ideas as he continued on to graduate studies at San Francisco State.

But recognizing that he loved the outdoors, being in nature, and hiking in the woods, "I discovered there are a lot of things that were threatening nature, and I became involved in a project in Mono Lake in the Eastern Sierras."

"Los Angeles was draining the water and a group of people got together and decided to fight it. They won the lawsuit, and today Los Angeles has gone from being one of the worst users of water to one of the best users in a large urban center in the world."

"So I saw that I could combine my interest in photography with my interest in social issues and my interest in the environment and nature."

Robert Dawson pulled together teams to create photo books such as The Great Central Valley - California's Heartland with Stephen Johnson and Gerald W. Haslam.

"We all grew up in the Central Valley. We all left, now we wanted to take another look. At the time, there had never been an effort to look at the region. It was an ignored place. It started in 1983, and we published a book in 1994. It was an 11-year project."

"The environment is part of it, but not the main part. It is really understanding the culture, the physical place itself, and some of the economics of the Valley."

That was followed by another project, the Water in the West project—which came out of the 1980s drought when didn't rain for about four years in California, and was all over the arid West.

"Water defined the American West," Robert noted. "Whoever has the water, has the power."

It was followed by Farewell, Promised Land with Guy Bracken. It followed the history of California's environment through photographs—both historical and current. "California was always viewed as the promised land, ... but since the Gold Rush, we have been transforming our river systems."

Robert's current work, The Public Library, is a compendium of photographs of public libraries taken over 18 years in 48 states.

West Sac woman opens restaurant in Clarksburg

By Gary Baker

The next time you head into the heart of the Delta Wine Country, check out Husick's Country Store BBQ and Taphouse in Clarksburg.

Located in a large, historic building (built in 1890), formerly a family run hardware store, at the corner of Riverview Road (Hwy 160) and Netherlands Road, the "store" is owned and operated by the charming Katherine van Diest.

A shout from the back counter, where the menu is listed above the kitchen, is Katherine's greeting as she comes forward to seat you at an available table. She sits down with you like an old friend and introduces herself while telling you today's specials. In her casual but efficient style she takes your order off to the kitchen.

Katherine, a native West Sacramentan, comes to the restaurant business with the indomitable spirit of an early Delta pioneer whose entrepreneurial experience, oddly enough, includes more years of charity work for non-profits than

New fire chief will be a familiar face

John Heilmann, a former firefighter, engineer and captain for the West Sacramento Fire Department, will return beginning April 17 to take over from Rick Martinez as the city's fire chief.

Heilmann has recently served as deputy fire chief of the operations division at UC Davis and the City of Davis fire departments, reports the West Sacramento City Manager's office.

"John is a West Sacramento success story," said City Manager Martin Tuttle in a press statement. "He spent 15 years with the city fire department, became a leader at UC Davis, and we're delighted to welcome him as our new fire chief."

"Heilmann was instrumental in the origination of the West Valley Regional Fire Training Consortium, which coordinates training among UC Davis, City of Davis, Woodland and West Sacramento fire departments," added the city manager's office. "I'm excited for the opportunity," Heilmann was quoted in the press statement. "I look forward to returning to West Sacramento and building on the great work of Fire Chief Rick Martinez."

It struck a chord—receiving support from several prominent writers who felt that public libraries started them on the road to authorship, and a forward from Bill Moyers. "Moyers grew up poor in Texas and the public libraries had saved his life."

"I got all these other writers to write for free, and they all said the same thing that the public library is what transformed them and made them what they were in terms of becoming writers."

"Photography is my way of continuing my education," Robert concluded. "Photography is my way of continuing my education."

Want to be popular with the ladies? Learn to dance

Is it just me, or do all people love to give advice, even when it's not particularly wanted? And for me at least, the problem seems to have gotten much worse as the years have gone by. I think maybe it has something to do with the fact that all my kids are now old enough to completely ignore me when I want to offer them my opinion about something. So I have had to start going in search of complete strangers to get my "giving out unwanted advice" fix, which brings me to my little story.

I was recently on the golf course when a young man in his late-20s started talking to his friend (they were in my foursome) and I overheard him say, "I haven't been out on a real date in ages. I'm starting to think there's something wrong with me."

"Can you dance?" I blurted out in his direction.

"What?" he asked, obviously not sure if he had heard me correctly.

"Can you dance?" I asked again, this time a little louder.

He smiled at me and said, "No, not even a little!"

"Well," I said, "then there's your problem."

"Really?" he asked, still smiling.

"Have you ever seen a Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers' movie?"

"Not really," he answered, looking at me very strangely, "but I think I know who you're talking about. Wasn't he that old guy who used to always wear a top hat and tuxedo?"

"That's Fred Astaire alright. Do you remember anything else about him?"

"Not really."

"Well," I said, "the most remarkable thing about Fred Astaire was that he was butt-ugly, and he couldn't have weighed more than 130 pounds soaking wet. Plus he was short and had to wear a hairpiece because he was almost completely bald."

"And your point is?" asked the young man, smiling again.

"My point is that butt-ugly Fred Astaire was always floating over dance floors with beautiful Ginger Rogers and lots of other gorgeous women in his arms. In other words, if you want to have pretty girls hanging all over you, just learn how to dance! I'm telling you, there's nothing a woman likes more than a man who knows how to dance!"

"Really?" asked the young man, suddenly interested in what I had to say. "But even if I could dance, I don't know any places to actually go and do it."

"Hey," chimed in his friend, "I know some pretty cool clubs where people still dance." And as the two of them were discussing the subject in more detail, I found my mind drifting all the way back to the long-ago days when I first learned how to dance.

I was about 14 years old (maybe 13) when my twin sister suggested to my parents that we have a garage dance. The idea somehow caught on and before long all of our West Sacramento friends for blocks around were hosting dances in their colorfully decorated garages, too. They were very simple affairs, with parents for chaperons, cake to eat and punch to drink, and Ricky Nelson and Elvis Presley records for dancing. At the time, I wasn't really into girls, and actually dancing with one of them was something I was hoping to put off for as many years as humanly possible. My idyllic life more or less revolved around the sport of baseball, and if I wasn't playing it at the local school with my friends, I was watching it on TV or desperately trying to obtain the autographs and bubble gum cards of all the San Francisco Giants. And during baseball season, I always went to bed listening on my little transistor radio to the Sacramento Solons games.

Anyway, my sister noticed all this, convinced my mother that I was shamefully lacking in all the social graces, and the garage dances were seen as a good way for me to begin correcting the problem. So learn to dance I somehow did, and it turned out to be a lot more fun than I had ever imagined once I found myself in the arms of some of my sister's very cute girlfriends. Not only did they smell a lot better than most of the guys I was always hanging out with, but with a pretty girl in my arms and a great old slow song like Smoke Gets in Your Eyes playing in the background, I was pretty much sure I had died and gone to heaven.

"Okay," my young golfing partner suddenly said to me, "I think I just may give this dancing thing a try. I mean, how hard can it be to learn how to shuffle my feet around a little bit on a dance floor? Thanks for the advice!"

"Believe me," I said, "you'll never regret learning how to dance. But don't forget, if you really want to score some points, take your date out to dinner first – then dancing."

"How come?"

"Because nothing puts a woman in a good mood faster than not having to cook. And when she hears she's going dancing, too, that means she gets to wear some of her very best clothes and shoes, listen to really good live music, and pretend she's Ginger Rogers for a few hours. And don't worry if you're not the greatest dancer in the world right away, because you're already way ahead of the game."

"How so?"

"Because you're not as butt-ugly as Fred Astaire."

A menu of primarily sandwiches, sides, and salads features BBQ Ribs and Tri-Tip and a sinfully creamy Mac & Cheese. In addition, barbequed pork and house hot links are typically on the menu. Side dishes include potato salad, baked beans, and greens. To go orders are quickly prepared for river road travelers headed to nearby wineries for tastings and picnics. Take-out orders have also become a big hit with the locals with lines going out the door on weekends and special occasions. Husick's offers wine tastings from various local wineries and features the Delta's largest selection of micro brewed beers in a new taphouse. West Sacramento's own Yolo Brewing and Jack Rabbit beers are among the many available. Open Thursdays through Sundays, the "store" recently added Sunday live jazz at noon, accompanied with wine tasting options to liven up your afternoon enjoyment. A speaker series on local, delta and regional water issues takes place on Thursday nights. Turnout has been so successful, the church hall next door had to be rented to accommodate the crowd. Katherine explained what kind of ambience she was aiming for: "Come home, relax, enjoy."

'Realignment' schedule change

From the County of Yolo

There has been a change to the public hearing schedule in West Sacramento on "realignment," the state-mandated strategy of reducing prison overcrowding by redirecting prisoners to local jails and reducing jail terms for others.

Yolo County Chief Probation Officer Brent Cardall will lead several sessions, along with other members of the Yolo County Criminal Justice Cabinet. "Community participation and input is a vital component of our collaborative policy development approach in Yolo County," said Cardall in a press release. "All interested residents of Yolo County are encouraged to attend."

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Immigrant" (R)
-- Ewa (Marion Coutillard) and her sister make the harrowing journey to Ellis Island from their home in Poland, only to be told that their immigration would end there. A smooth-talking and enigmatic businessman (Joaquin Phoenix) happens to be at the immigration office, and he says he can get them onto Manhattan. The catch is that the innocent and demure Ewa must work for him as a dancer and prostitute. In the darkness of her situation, Ewa catches a flash of hope coming from a dapper stage magician (Jeremy Renner).

The story is engaging and heartrending, staying visually stylistic without ever melting into melodramatic bluster. The light and mood coming from the picture captures another world, and it might as well be a 1921 New York. It's a slow, serious drama with an emotional pay off.

"Pelican Dreams" (G)
-- Just a few years back, a pelican caused a commotion on San Francisco's storied Golden Gate Bridge. She was wandering the bridge, injured, lost, confused and in need of help. She was swooped up, taken to a shelter and named "Gigi." Gigi's story of rescue and the humans helping her rehabilitate is the main draw for this curious and thoughtful documentary about the big birds.

It turns out that pelicans have a lot going on, more than enough to keep kids and adults paying attention and caring for an 80-minute run time. They're meant to be out in the wild, but they can become peculiarly dog-like when they spend too much time with people. Still, pelicans are not pets, and those who can't rejoin the wild world often meet with euthanasia -- raising the stakes for those of us who develop a soft spot for the awkward little guys on-screen.

"The Invisible Front" (Not Rated) -- As German power faded in eastern Europe toward the end of World War II, Soviet occupation became the new threat to the many people who favored democratic government, or who had suffered during communist occupation earlier in the war. This documentary takes a very personal look at a Lithuanian resistance group that would come to be known as "The Forest Brothers." The filmmakers craft a riveting story with the letters, photographs and living testimonials from those who were there.

"Happy Valley" (Not Rated) -- Penn State football and Joe Paterno enjoyed years of praise and success, until the child abuse scandal that came to light in 2011 turned a college football program into a firestorm. This documentary takes a keen focus on the reaction and impact in the community that idolized Paterno and Penn State football. Some people just denied, other raged or pointed fingers. There were plenty of public meltdowns, even a full-blown riot. It's an uncomfortable line of thinking, but one worth following -- how should a community respond when there's

"Rightsize ... Right Now! The 8-Week Plan to Organize, Declutter and Make Any Move Stress-Free"

by Regina Leeds
(De Capo Lifelong Books, $15.99)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Along with death, divorce, job loss and major illness, moving is one of life's most stressful experiences. For the many Americans in transition, this handy guide will make moving and downsizing a little easier.

Regina Leeds is the author of nine books, including the national bestseller "One Year to an Organized Life." She points out that moving is rarely an enjoyable experience and more often than not can be overwhelming. Just the thought of packing, hauling and the chaotic clutter of boxes can send most of us in a tailspin.

something truly ugly to confront?

In her new easy-to-use guide, she outlines functional steps for a successful move. She reveals how to: make a budget, find suitable movers, set up moving day for each room in the house, organize and pack a child's room and visualize the new home so that the transition will be more sane. She even suggests ways of tackling problem areas such as the garage, attic and even the laundry room.

Even if not faced with actually moving, downsizing can be almost as difficult. Determining what to save and what to toss takes more than just a little effort. Leeds, who was named "best organizer" by Los Angeles magazine, points out her three-step "magic formula" to accomplish a successful move or downsizing: eliminate, categorize and organize. Elimination is easier said than done, especially when faced with items that are no longer needed but still have a sentimental attachment.

Leeds has spent almost 25 years helping her clients prepare for new spaces, and her eight-week plan can help all of us clear clutter for our homes, better organize our lives and make these important changes without much of the stress.

Egg-Cellent Easter

The use of natural food dyes to color eggs became popular during medieval times. English kings distributed hundreds of decorated, gold-leaf eggs during Easter. Russian Czar Alexander III transformed this holiday custom to high-art when he commissioned the famous Faberge eggs as a gift for his wife, the Empress Maria Alexandrovna, from goldsmith Peter Carl Faberge.

Today, hard-cooked eggs act as a creative canvas for children and adults during the Easter holiday. For the perfect hard-cooked eggs, decorated with homemade dye, follow the directions below.

Preparing Eggs for Decoration

Tip: Keep the egg carton to store your Easter eggs in!

1. Bring eggs to room temperature.
2. Place the eggs in room temperature water in a large pot.
3. Bring to a boil, then turn down to a low boil for 12 minutes.
4. Quickly chill the eggs in ice-cold water.
5. The eggs must be completely cool and dry to decorate successfully.
6. Hard-cooked eggs should be kept refrigerated and used within one week.

NOTE: The greenish color around the yolk of hard-cooked eggs is a natural result of sulfur and iron reacting at the surface of the yolk. It may occur when eggs are cooked too long or at too high of temperature, or when there is a high amount of iron in the cooking water. Although the color may be unappealing, the eggs are still wholesome and nutritious, and their flavor is unaffected.

Greenish yolks can best be avoided by using the proper cooking time and temperature (avoid intense boiling) and by rapidly cooling the cooked eggs. Scrambled eggs can develop a greenish tint if overcooked at too high a temperature or if they are left too long in a metal pan.

Egg-cellent Decorating Tips

1. Use crayons to gently color a design on the hard-cooked Easter eggs. If you want to dye the crayon-decorated eggs, the crayon wax will resist the dye and the design will show through.
2. Use craft supplies: buttons, sequins, glitter, beads, pieces of felt, or stickers. Use white or craft glue to attach the materials.
3. To make your own dye: Combine 1/2 to 1 tablespoon of food coloring with 2 teaspoons of white, distilled vinegar in a large cup or deep bowl. You can experiment by mixing the food coloring to create a variety of hues. Add water until the cup or bowl is half full.
4. Gently place the eggs into the dyeing liquid in the cup or bowl, using a soup spoon to avoid cracking the shell. The longer the eggs are left in the dye, the darker the color will become.
